CALIFORNIA COASTAL COMMISSION
 ORANGE COUNTY
BEACH ACCESS
MAP
 Includes detailed descriptions, facilities, and parking information

Orange County is known for its excellent surfing conditions at Huntington Beach, the yacht harbor at Newport Beach, and the artists' community at Laguna Beach. The coast serves as a resort area for nearby residents due to its year-round warm weather, high cliffs, wide beaches, and sandy coves. This pleasant environment provides opportunities for swimming, sunbathing, boating, fishing, diving, and surfing.

From Seal beach to Newport Beach, broad sandy beaches are backed by low-lying plains and wetlands. Several of these wetlands have been established as nature preserves.

South of Newport Beach, uplifted marine terraces form cliffs at the water's edge, providing numerous coves for swimming and diving.

Orange County is named for the commercial groves of orange trees that once grew in the area beginning in the late 1800s.

Several of the beaches in southern Orange County have tidepools. Plants and animals in tidepools are very sensitive to human contact.

To preserve tidepools, please observe the following rules:

- Watch where you step. Step only on bare rock or sand.
- Don't touch any living organisms. Most tidepool animals are protected by a coating of slime. Touching them with dry hands can damage these animals.
- Don't poke or prod tidepool animals with a stick. Don't attempt to pry animals off of rocks.
- Leave everything as you found it (or cleaner by picking up any garbage you come across). Collecting organisms is illegal in most tidepools and will kill them.
